

Governor George C. Wallace

Wallace shot, will recover

LAUREL, Md. (UPI)—Gov. George C. Wallace, who won the support of millions of Americans with his plea to "send them a message," was shot at close range by a young white man Monday as he campaigned for votes in Maryland's presidential primary.

Rushed to a hospital by ambulance and helicopter, Wallace was on the operating table about five hours as a team of surgeons removed one bullet from his chest but decided to "wait a few days" on another lodged near his spine. The bullet near his spinal cord prompted fears that the 52-year-old Alabama governor might have suffered crippling damage.

Just before midnight, one of the six doctors who performed the surgery said "we expect a good recovery" and that the governor might "be able to go home in five to 10 days."

But Dr. Joseph Schanno, who is a vascular surgeon, also cautioned that "there is some paralysis at this time from the hips down" and "it is difficult to predict what the spinal problem will be."

In all, Schanno said, Wallace suffered "four or five wounds" and that the most serious was caused by a bullet which "perforated through the back of the abdomen and lodged near the spinal cord."

After the surgery, George Mangum, a campaign worker for Wallace, reported "the governor is doing fine." He quoted doctors as saying that Wallace's vital signs were normal and that he had been taken from the operating room to the recovery room about 11 p.m. EDT.

Wallace was shot at 4:04 p.m. EDT at Laurel Plaza, a shopping center about 35 miles north of Washington. He had finished his speech and was shaking hands with admirers when he came face-to-face with the would-be assassin.

Rep. William Nichols, D-Ala., told reporters a little after 9 p.m. that the surgeons had halted the operation for consultations with Mrs. Wallace.

"It's rather quiet upstairs," Nichols said. "They're in the process of making some decisions. He said Wallace would be 'quite alert mentally as he ever was, but I'm sure that they're concerned about his legs.'"

Rep. Nichols had told reporters that he wasn't sure, but he felt the operation had been halted while surgeons decided whether to try to remove the bullet near Wallace's spine.

Immediately after the shooting, police arrested a man at the scene who was identified as Arthur Bremer, 21, of Milwaukee. Officials brought both federal and state charges against him and one said, "We'll fight it out in the morning as to who gets first crack at him."

Maryland States Attorney Arthur A. Marshall told a news conference at the Prince Georges County Courthouse in Upper Marlboro: "I don't know what motivated him. I am convinced he acted entirely alone."

Other officials, including an assistant treasury secretary in charge of the Secret Service, discounted any idea that a conspiracy was involved.

Bremer, described in Milwaukee as a loner "who stayed pretty much to himself and didn't talk much," was whisked into the federal court building in Baltimore at 10:20 p.m. At least a dozen federal agents in six cars, sped to a loading dock at the rear of the building, pulled the suspect from a car and hustled him into the basement, apparently to take him either to an FBI office or the U.S. magistrate.

Bremer was about 5-foot-7 and weighed roughly 140 pounds. He had short, reddish-blond hair and his hands were handcuffed.

Officials said he offered no indication why he shot Wallace. One high ranking Justice Department official said he refused to talk at all until he got a lawyer.

At another hospital in the area, where a wounded Secret Service agent also had undergone surgery, officials reported receiving two anonymous telephone calls from a woman who told the switchboard operator: "If he (Wallace) is not dead within a half hour the hospital will be bombed." No bomb was found.

In addition to Wallace and the Secret Service agent—the first ever hurt by gunfire while protecting the President or presidential candidates—an Alabama State Highway Patrol Captain and a woman bystander suffered gunshot wounds. They both were treated and released.

Shooting shocks Nixon, candidates

By United Press International President Nixon and Gov. George C. Wallace's principal opponents for the Democratic presidential nomination expressed shock Monday at the shooting of Wallace while he was campaigning in Laurel, Md.

Nixon telephoned Wallace's wife to say he was "terribly concerned," White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said. Ziegler said the President told Mrs. Wallace "Now I want you to tell him directly that Mrs. Nixon and I will remember him in our thoughts and prayers."

Treasury Secretary John B. Connally who was wounded in the motorcade ride in Dallas, Tex., in November 1963, when John F. Kennedy was slain, shook his head in disbelief at the new violence.

"It's just unbelievable," he told a reporter. "It's just so tragic that things like this happen in this country. It makes you want to weep."

Connally was riding in the limousine jumpseat when Lee Harvey Oswald fired shots at the moving motorcade as it was headed for the Dallas Trade Fair. He was wounded in his hand and took many months to recover.

Nixon issued a statement saying: "In deep concern for Governor Wallace's condition I ask all Americans to join me in praying for his speedy and full recovery and also for that of the others who were wounded in this senseless and tragic incident."

"Our nation has suffered more than enough already from the intrusion of violence into its political processes. We must all stand together to eliminate its vicious threat from our public; we must not permit the shadow of violence to fall over our country again."

"Oh, my God," was the initial reaction of Sen. Hubert Humphrey, who also was campaigning in Maryland.

Pennsylvania's two Senators Monday voiced shock and dismay upon learning that Gov. Wallace had been shot just outside Washington in suburban Maryland.

Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, meanwhile said he, "like all thinking Americans,

Local residents shocked

STROUDSBURG — Local reaction to the assassination attempt seemed to hold the line with reactions across the nation.

D.S. Hunsicker, a West End resident and chairman of the Wallace for President Committee in Monroe County, said "I feel sorry for him and I'll pray for him to recover. I still wonder what the idea behind it is, though."

Henry G. Steller, of Stroudsburg, said "It was really kind of a shock. It may have a tendency to give him some kind of sympathy vote. It seems (the shooting) is a general trend throughout politics today."

Jacques Trahan, Henryville: "I was really shocked. You almost expect something like this to happen early in the campaign but it's almost over. I don't think it will change any of the votes but the man was gaining all the time."

Ernest Franza, of Bushkill: "It's the most shameful thing I've ever heard. What's the matter with people anymore?"

Donald Bruce, manager of the Gran Prix service stations in Monroe County, said: "I'm not too happy about it but then I wouldn't be too happy no matter who got shot. It does go to show you how sick this country is, though."

deplored the act of violence perpetrated upon the governor."

Minority leader Hugh Scott, minutes after word reached Washington, called the shooting an "appalling" tragedy.

"America was founded on five freedoms," he said. "Now our freedom from fear has been violated."

Sen. Richard S. Schweiker, R-Pa., said he was "deeply shocked by the senseless shooting." The nation "has been torn apart by political assassination" before. "I hope Gov. Wallace was not seriously hurt and he will recover," the Senator added.

McDade reiterated Schweiker's hope that those responsible would be "brought very speedily to justice."

He said "such acts which have had so devastating an emotional impact upon our nation in the past cry out for both a speedy prosecution and a firm resolve among the overwhelming majority that the right to free speech and unfettered political activity will be the nation's future."

Both Senators Humphrey and George McGovern cancelled campaigning against Gov. Wallace in the Michigan primary which the wounded Alabamian was expected to win anyway.

The camps of both the Minnesota and South Dakota Senators sent out word that radio and television commercials would be taken off the air and campaigning was suspended.

McGovern got the news of the Wallace shooting as he was campaigning against the Alabamian in Kalamazoo. He stood by the side of a pickup truck where he had just finished speaking and, visibly shaken, asked his supporters to "hope and pray for the speedy recovery of Governor Wallace and say a prayer for our own country."

U.S. mines rivers, canals, to shut off enemy supplies

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Pentagon disclosed Monday the United States has dropped mines in some of North Vietnam's rivers and canals, in addition to mining the country's seven harbors, to try to shut off supplies to the Communist invasion of South Vietnam.

Defense Department sources also said the United States is preparing to send a seventh aircraft carrier, the USS Ticonderoga, to Southeast Asia "soon." The Ticonderoga, an anti-submarine warfare carrier, is now at San Diego, Calif.

The sources said the Ticonderoga could be assigned to Yankee Station off the Vietnamese coast—raising the number of carriers there to a record five. They said it was also possible the new carrier could be assigned to a cruising anti-submarine patrol or to the line of Navy craft in the Tonkin Gulf warning merchant vessels of the mined ports.

The Ticonderoga, with its anti-submarine aircraft and helicopters and its escort of six or seven destroyers, is being sent to Southeast Asia because so many of the destroyers normally assigned to the carrier task force there have been diverted to shore bombardment duties.

"When CINCPAC (the U. S. commander in chief of Pacific forces) has that many ships deployed, he naturally starts thinking about the submarine threat," one source said. "It's not that there is a submarine problem now, but when you get that many ships together, naval doctrine dictates that you consider this possibility."

Meanwhile, South Vietnamese helicopter troops recaptured without opposition fire base Bastogne on the road to Hue—the first base retaken by government troops in the 47-day-old Communist offensive.

But to the South, North Vietnamese troops and tanks attacked the Central Highlands provincial capital of Kontum for the second consecutive day in a drive to cut South Vietnam in half.

Supreme Court lets Amish keep children from school

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Amish won unanimous Supreme Court consent Monday to refuse to send their children to high school so they can preserve the old fashioned way of life their religion prescribes.

The 7-0 decision written by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, marked a victory for the sect which has long been in conflict with state laws requiring children to attend school until age 16.

The old order Amish, known as "the plain people," are willing to let their children finish any eighth grade education, but no more. Essentially devoted to farming, they argue that sending their children to high school exposes them to "competition, ambition, consumerism and speed" in violation of their beliefs.

The ruling came in a Wisconsin test case with Burger emphasizing it would apply only to the Amish, who are found in 20 states—mainly Pennsylvania, Ohio, Iowa, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan, Kansas and Virginia. Married men wear beards and black and women and girls wear old-fashioned costumes including poke bonnets.

The clash between the Amish and authorities involved instances where the children would finish the eighth grade before reaching age 16 and their parents would refuse to keep them in school as required by state law. Amish fathers in a number of states have gone to jail rather than violate their Biblical tenet.

Equal women's rights voted delayed by Senate

HARRISBURG (UPI)—The state Senate refused to jump on the equal rights for women bandwagon Monday and voted to send the bill back to committee.

"The recommitment of the bill is not to defeat, delay or in any manner kill it," said Sen. Austin J. Murphy, D-Washington, who is chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Revision.

The House has passed the resolution to adopt the 27th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Seventeen of the necessary 38 state legislatures also have ratified it.

Murphy said he hoped to hold a public hearing on the bill "soon." He said the committee wanted to find out whether the bill could be amended and whether it could be submitted to the electorate.

Amtrak revamps all fares with low prices in East

Dow Jones-Offaway News

WASHINGTON — The National Railroad Passenger Corp. announced a major revamping of fares, generally trimming prices in the East but raising them in the West.

Overall, the fare changes will add an estimated three per cent, or $4.6 million a year, to revenues based on current ridership, an Amtrak spokesman said. The increases in the package were approved by the Price Commission. They go into effect on June 11, when summer train schedules begin.

The fare revisions, developed after "an intensive route-by-route analysis" of services offered by Amtrak and competing forms of transportation, were mainly designed "to make economical train travel available to more people" and to "move the corporation toward a more equitable rail-fare structure nationwide," said Roger Lewis, chairman and president. He said the fare hikes will partly offset labor and material cost increases of $23 million a year, but the "principal benefit" will come from filling empty seats on "problem routes."

This is the first wholesale revamping of fares by the semi-public corporations since it took over most of the nation's passenger trains on May 1, 1971. It has made some earlier adjustments, however, mainly fare cuts on the Boston-New York route. Lewis said the fare structure Amtrak inherited from 13 railroads was out of line, fares in the east being higher than those in the West and South. So Amtrak was being "priced out of the market" in some areas and "getting too little" in others, he said.

Pressure on prices charged by Amtrak competitors is generally upward. The Interstate Commerce Commission allowed interstate bus fares of $40 or less to go up five per cent Monday. Airlines are seeking a three per cent increase from the Civil Aeronautics Board.

While the burden of the adjustments is to reduce fares in the East and raise them in the West, there will be reductions of 10 per cent to 25 per cent on a number of short-haul and long-distance routes in the Midwest and on the West Coast, as well as in the East.

Increases of five per cent to 10 per cent will be made on four long-distance routes in the West and South.

Fares on the popular high-speed, New York-Washington "Metroliner" will also rise. The current $17 coach fare will go up as much as $2, while first class fares will climb to $30.90 from $27.40 one way, between New York and Washington. On the same route, however, Amtrak is lowering its fare on slower conventional trains to $11.25 from $13.

Demand exceeds space on many metroliners, while conventional-train patronage has fallen off, an Amtrak spokesman noted. So the corporation is adjusting fares on both types of trains as a "marketing tool," he said.

Some typical one-way coach-fare reductions: New York-Chicago, to $42.10 from $52.35; New York-Kansas City, to $57.00 from $72.65; Chicago-Detroit, to $13 from $16.25.

Increases include: Chicago-Los Angeles, to $95 from $86.75; Chicago-Seattle, to $90 from $81.25; Chicago-San Francisco, to $95 from $91.75.

Shirley Chisholm, Kennedy get protection

Nixon telephones Mrs. Wallace

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Nixon offered and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy accepted temporary Secret Service protection Monday in the aftermath of the shooting of Gov. George C. Wallace.

The White House also announced that the President talked with Mrs. Wallace by phone at the hospital where her husband was undergoing exploratory surgery. Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the Alabama governor's wife reported her husband was "consious" at the time Nixon phoned and that she was "optimistic" about his condition.

Ziegler said that on hearing of the shooting Nixon, swiftly summoned Treasury Secretary John B. Connally to the White House to direct him to offer Secret Service protection to both Kennedy and Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D-N.Y., an announced candidate for the presidential nomination who previously had not been included in security arrangements.

Kennedy, whose two elder brothers, John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy, were assassinated, had turned down Secret Service protection, on grounds he was not a candidate.

Ziegler said that Mrs. Chisholm was being contacted about a secret service guard but there was no word from her yet.

The press secretary said that the President told Mrs. Wallace that both he and Mrs. Nixon were "terribly concerned" about the Alabama governor and "hoped and prayed that everything goes well."

After Nixon obtained Mrs. Wallace's report on her husband's condition, Ziegler told her:

"Now I want you to tell him directly that Mrs. Nixon and I will remember him in our thoughts and prayers."

Ziegler said that on Nixon's instructions, Connally called Kennedy and informed him of the offer.

"Senator Kennedy accepted on a temporary basis," Ziegler reported.

Ziegler read a formal statement from the President:

"In deep concern for Gov. Wallace's condition, I ask all Americans to join me in praying for his speedy and full recovery and also for that of the others who were wounded in this senseless and tragic incident.

"Our nation has suffered more than enough already from the intrusion of violence into its political processes. We must all stand together to eliminate its vicious threat from our public; we must not permit the shadow of violence to fall over our country again."

UCC to close camp

POCONO MANOR — A total 400 delegates to the annual meeting of Penn Northeast Conference of the United Church of Christ Monday afternoon faced up to two hard realities of the current youth programs of the church.

The meeting took the first steps to close out its present summer camping program. For 45 years, the church conference has backed Camp Mensch Mills in Berks County. For 10 years it has backed this camp and nearby Fern Wood with Penn Southeast Conference.

It was pointed out that young people no longer are nearly so interested in camping in one place as they once were. Today they want canoe trips, theater trips and long hikes. As a result, the older camps are suffering from a lack of funds as well as from operating costs.

The conference voted to close out Camp Mensch Mills by 1973 and work toward separating from Penn Southeast Conference. Future camping operations will be made more interesting to young people and more economical.

The conference Monday defeated a move to add an additional lay delegate from each church under 30 years of age.

The meeting will close with a vote on the 1973 budget today.

Assessing program underway

MILFORD — The Commissioners of Pike County engaged two assessors on Monday. They are John Quinn of Dingman Township and Joseph Erdle of Lackawaxen.

They will work under Chief Assessor Thomas Coleman on a reassessment program for the county.

Commissioners George Coult and Warner M. Dupuy meeting with Treasurer Edward Delling as a county pay board set the annual salaries of Quinn and Erdle at $8,000 each.

Coleman was given an increase from $8,000 to $9,000.

It was announced a card system for recording information on individual properties is now being prepared for use by the assessor's office.

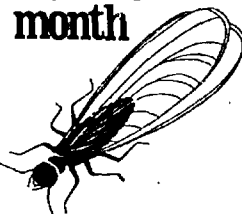

The pay board also increased the salary of Mrs. Genevieve Greeves from $5,700 to $6,000. Mrs. Greeves is an assistant clerk in the commissioners office.

The hiring of Mrs. Carolyn Purdue as a full time secretary for Magistrate August Metz, III was also approved. She will receive $4,200.

The commissioners having been informed by the Secretary of the Commonwealth that current Pennsylvania voter residency requirements have been nullified by a recent Supreme Court decision, stated they would abide by the ruling and subsequent legislative changes.

The commissioners reported they had objected to the Tocks Island project in a written statement to the Congressional hearing last week because financial burdens created as a result of the project would apparently have to be assumed by the county without federal financial assistance.

Drug laws abroad:

If you're touring a foreign country this summer, get set for some hard news.

No matter which way you go, you'll run smack into drug laws that are a whole lot tougher than ours.

You may have heard differently. You may have heard possession and sale of drugs overseas or south of our own border is okay. Or at least tolerated. That's a lie. Drugs are illegal. The same as here. And that's the truth.

Only one thing is different. The penalties are stiffer. In Lebanon, for instance, possession gets you 3 to 5 years in a mental hospital. That's the law. And there's no way around their law.

Drug arrests of Americans overseas have jumped 70% since last year. And nobody can help. Not friends. Or family. Or the smartest lawyer in town. Not the United States government.

That's why there are over 700 American citizens doing time on drug charges in foreign jails.

Those are the facts. And so are these: the drug laws and penalties of 15 foreign countries.

Which one will you be visiting?

Mexico. Possession, 2 to 9 years plus fine. Trafficking, 3 to 10 years plus fine. Illegal import or export of drugs, 6 to 15 years plus fine. Persons arrested on drug charges can expect a minimum of 6 to 12 months pre-trial confinement.

We let 'them' live 'like that'

One of our reporters was in the Beers Street area the other day, preparing an article on families living in condemned houses, and he returned a shaken young man.

"How can people be allowed to live like that?" he asked. Give him two points for humanity. For we have heard other people comment on families living in similarly decrepit homes and uninviting conditions, and their statement was, "How can people live like that?"

The difference is in the word "allowed," and the difference is between sympathy and bigotry. "How can people live like that?" It implies that these people want to live in the conditions in which they are found, even though they know better.

Those same "How-can-they-live-like-that?" people have been known to discourage public, low-income housing because: "It does no good to move them into clean quarters; they only make them filthy in no time at all."

Sure, if they are simply popped into new quarters and left to their own devices. Man, remember, is an animal, who thinks. His animalistic qualities are only polished by learning and experience. Take away either or both, and man is little better than the beasts of the fields, and in some cases worse.

The sort of learning and experience that can lead a family out of slum living is the sort offered by Head Start programs, where children and their parents are shown and taught a way of life that has eluded them through lack of money and background. Day Care, as proposed by the Children's Aid Bureau, was intended to work in a similar manner, to help whole families break out of the consuming cycle of poverty and ignorance.

But that program was voted down. Many people cheered (Yay! Another federal handout program beaten!) and we suggest they are the same people who ask, "How can they live like that?"

They can live like that because other, more fortunate people want them to live like that; other, more fortunate people don't want to share, through the channel of tax-supported programs, their goods, as someone once advised us to do if we wanted eternal glory. We believe His name was Jesus Christ.

Opulence, austerity

The governor's task force on economy in government has, among other items, come up with something showing that quite possibly many state employees are sinking too deeply into the automotive lap of luxury.

Put another way, too many state-owned cars have air-conditioning in them.

And if the number of air-conditioned cars were reduced in line with the task force's recommendations, the state would save better than half a million dollars yearly — $587,000 to be exact.

It is not as if anyone is bending the law in getting cars with air-conditioning; says the task force:

Air-conditioning has been approved as standard equipment for state-owned sedans and station wagons.

Limiting this option to state police cruisers and vehicles which are operated constantly would be more in line with industrial fleet practices."

State employees are supposed to be public servants. And although no one should wish to reduce them to serfdom, it is rather disconcerting to think that some public servants are riding around in the type of store-bought comfort that many taxpayers cannot afford for themselves.

Unnecessary opulence, at taxpayer expense, has, we fear, practically caused the demise of a more-to-be-desired condition of government: functional austerity.

Stamp news

Hatteras issue

By RAY PATTON

The two-cent Cape Hatteras stamp released April 5 had a scheduled printing of 65 million. The majority of the post offices did not have these as they were not automatically distributed, but had to be ordered by the post offices. As the orders were greater than expected, 100 million more had to be printed and, as of this date, that is the figure, making 41.5 million of each design or that number of blocks of four.

Only patience left

Study the terrazzo floor long enough and the tiny bits of stone begin to swirl. A hospital room is a place of microscopic interests. The walls of Room 812 were green five days ago, but now they have faded into pea soup. The hands on the wristwatch begin to lurch. Time, and a smidge of pain, conspire against the patient.

Nothing is as it was. My problem is so simple that it is almost insoluble. The sixth and seventh vertebrae from the bottom nudged each other and pinched a nerve which has an astonishing ability to run down the left leg to the ankle. The pain is not so intolerable that the patient can permit himself a succession of moans.

It is more like a three-foot toothache. I tell myself it is not here and the telephone wire tells me I'm a liar. So I resort to twisting in bed, cranking the head up, then down, waiting for something exciting to happen — like the knock on the door when the nurse wants to take my blood pressure.

Small talk and reading

We regale each other with small conversation about where we were born, and how hard a life our parents had, and how things are not the way they used to be. This comes to four times a day, five minutes each. Then I try a book but that tiny ache keeps telling me: "You don't know what you're reading."

I look at the red carnations Gayle sent and I wonder how, dead, they manage to keep their heads up longer than I can. Sometimes, when the door is half open, I listen for the old monsignor. I have not seen him, but I know the basso profundo grunts and the nurses have told me how he scratches himself constantly. He wears a heart pacemaker and, at the age of 76, it keeps the poor man from his eternal reward.

Once I had an unexpected visit from a Mrs. Pfeiffer. She has graying hair and a face which, long ago, forgave those who had hurt her.

She explained, with the utmost politeness, that I had her dinner tray and she had mine. We had both ordered chicken and carrots and mashed potatoes and custard pudding. But she had also ordered tomato soup. As I had not touched it, I gave her the soup. She felt apologetic. I said "Please." She took it.

I went back to studying the terrazzo floor.

The bits of stone remained still. I turned on the remote control TV. All day long there are faces of young women in an agony of problems. The hurt, I would guess, is a man. Either he doesn't understand her, or she isn't sure whether she loves him or Nick the Iceman, or the children are going straight to hell.

The commercials are all soap. The women in the play are unhappier than the women at home watching. A few, like Mike Douglas, come beaming into the hospital room with a big smile, some jokes, and a happy song. For a while, the leg telegraph system shuts down.

The doctors ask how you feel. They come in the morning, looking more like bankers than medicine men, and they radiate optimism. Don't worry. The leg is going to be fine. Take it easy. Don't be impatient. Lots of people have sciatica pain. How about that man down the corridor who is on blue alert right now. He'd trade his problem for yours.

They do their best. A woman patient learns that I am in Room 812 and sends a white orchid wrapped in a blue plush bow. The note says I once wrote something she liked. If I were allowed out of bed, I would thank her in person for the flower.

Good and awful

Visitors arrive. They all pull their lips away from their teeth in a smile. "How do you feel?" they all ask. Sometimes you say good; sometimes you say awful. This depends not on pain, but on mood. My wife and daughters run themselves into exhaustion to the hospital. It must prove something, devotion perhaps, but the pain beats on like a heart of its own.

Five days now: 120 hours. I doze. I awaken, not knowing whether the sun is coming up or going down. It may be morning, or it may be night, but what day is it? The room is so silent I can hear an electric bulb hum. A visit to the bathroom is a source of excitement I save up. The door is opened. Now I can hear the rattle of trays and the whirl of table legs. A voice on a soft speaker calls for "Dr. Louis Bennett." The monsignor is silent, which means that he has taken his sleeping pill.

I lean over the edge of the bed. The little bits of stone begin the slow inexorable maelstrom. Room 812 is a nice place to visit, but...

McGovern weakness

I am not applying for a job, since I find teaching at Dartmouth fully satisfying. Nevertheless, as one who has written a good many political speeches for winning candidates during the last four years, I would like to point out that the George McGovern problem is eminently solvable. It would be a speech writer's job.

Analytically, the fundamental weakness of the McGovern candidacy as a national proposition is that he cannot maintain the positions that attract his zealous supporters, and broaden his appeal sufficiently to be a viable national candidate. But the strength of the McGovern operations resides in the cadres who are attracted to him because of his radical positions.

I would therefore, as a speech writer, exploit the contradictions in the McGovern operation by stressing his stands on amnesty for draft-dodgers, drastically reducing the penalty for pot so as to guarantee its widespread use, and abortion on demand.

His political base

These are not positions likely to appeal to the normal American voter, though McGovern must maintain them if he is to hold support of his political base on the left. His willingness to grant amnesty to draft-dodgers, his permissiveness as regards pot, and his sanction of abortion on demand also tell us a great deal about McGovern the man and the kind of America he desires.

McGovern badly needs inroads into the so-called blue-collar vote. Particularly among Catholic voters, I would stress his position on abortion, ditto pot. Catholic voters are a swing constituency in many of the key states. If a Democratic candidate, forgetting about the South, as McGovern, vide Florida, has forgotten about it, is to have any chance at all, he must carry the Catholic vote in the big industrial states. McGovern isn't for a chicken in every pot; he is for pot for every chick. And he would throw out the baby with the bath.

McGovern's position on national defense would be another electoral bonanza. He wants to trim the defense budget by $32 billion. Naturally, that would endanger the very existence of the country. Even worse, from the point of view of a McGovern candidacy, it would throw millions out of work. McGovern, therefore, would be the candidate of pot, abortion, national suicide and massive unemployment.

The last would be a potent theme, not only in the great industrial heartland, but also in the aerospace and technology centers of the South and Southwest. These arguments would go very well against a McGovern candidacy in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Ohio, Michigan and Florida, New Mexico, California — just for a start.

His tax proposals

McGovern's varied tax proposals are more complicated, but, as a speech writer, I would zero in on one of them. McGovern proposes that all personal income in excess of $50 thousand per year should be taxed at confiscatory levels (75 per cent as a minimum).

'Points to ponder'

Editor, The Record:

It's frightening to think about the kind of performance we might get from our politicians if they weren't controlled to some extent by the news media. Your timely editorials render a vital service to this cause.

They show a deep, serious concern for the average and most times forgotten citizen. I therefore believe it might be in our common interest to share the following thought with you:

"Points to ponder"

Richard M. Nixon was elected to office on the premise that there was a need for new leadership. (There was.) He also made three basic promises, to end the draft, to end the war in Vietnam, and to bring the people of this "great" country together.

There has been nothing new in the leadership for the most part. We still have the draft and the war, and we are divided more than ever before, except for the time of the Civil War. Last but not least, we may be on the brink of World War III.

Is it again time for another new leadership? Will it really make any difference if we choose Mr. Bad or Mr. Worse? All we can do is vote a poor performer out of office and hope and pray that we get a better one.

You may care to build one of your future editorials on these thoughts.

I suppose I would be remiss if I didn't suggest a solution. We need leaders with more integrity and less self-interest. You people in the news media can help by asking candidates for public office, the so-called servants of the people, how they expect to implement their proposed changes, what they have done about these problems in the past, how do they plan to overcome the opposition.

At least this may help to stop all the things they say that the people like to hear, but are never done.

I realize that your power in this area may be limited, but my hope is that the people of this country and for that matter every other country, can have their eyes opened to the parasitic politicians the world over.

Children await our choice

Editor, The Record:

President Nixon has asked the support of the American people for his latest policy of mining and blockading the harbors of North Vietnam, a policy he decided without even consulting the representatives of the American people in the Congress and Senate. He does not have my support.

How long will the American people allow this arrogance of power to continue without crying out in protest? We have been lulled into silence by Nixon's policy of withdrawal, somehow feigning an unawareness of the fact that the bombing of Vietnam has never abated. While our ground troop level decreases, our naval and air forces have tripled in the last few months.

Can any American, confronted with these facts, possibly be fooled into believing that Nixon is "winding down" the war?

As in any war, the innocent die without defense. When, at what point, will we as Americans rise up in a solid wall of conscience and say "no" to the bloodletting. It is up to us to redeem the times, and say no to this latest escalation of the war. The question we confront is really basic: Does America stand for life or death?

Those who have lived for years under the heaviest rain of bombs in the history of man, provide us with bloody answers. Maybe at long last, the American sham of Vietnamization has been exposed for even the blindest to see. Perhaps now we can unite and demand that future American policy be one of life and not death.

There are many children who await our choice.

Shocked at misinterpretation

Editor, The Record:

I am shocked that a fine paper like The Record would in its editorial column ignore or misinterpret for the public the words of the President of the United States.

What was said, very clearly, is, to paraphrase your editorial, "we can continue to supply South Vietnam with arms — for their defense — but you can't do the same for North Vietnam — for aggression against a weaker neighbor."

For heaven's sake, if you are going to write editorials, base them on facts, not on pink or political deliberate misrepresentations.

Pipeline to Rumania

WASHINGTON — Prime Minister Golda Meir of Israel did gain one important objective during her first-of-its-kind visit to Rumania.

Both President Nicolae Ceausescu and Premier Ion Gheorghe Maurer personally assured her that more Rumanian Jews will be allowed to migrate to Israel.

There was no hint of this consequential promise in the joint communique issued at the conclusions of Mrs. Meir's three-day stay.

In fact, nothing was said at any time about this significant matter either before or after her trip. Instead, public attention was centered on the possibility of Rumania acting as intermediary in bringing the Arabs and Jews to a negotiating table. Press and radio-TV coverage was concentrated entirely on that.

That was eminently agreeable to Prime Minister Meir and her Rumanian hosts. By mutual consent they were in full accord on the desirability of maintaining a total blackout on the touchy, and explosive immigration issue.

But in her talks with Ceausescu and Maurer, Mrs. Meir found them willing to make some concessions on permitting more Rumanian Jews to go to Israel. No formal agreement was sought or made, but the Rumanian leaders did give assurances that existing restrictions would be moderated.

Just what and how much that means only time will tell.

But on its face, their verbal commitment is a notable diplomatic triumph for Mrs. Meir — which could have far-reaching impact on both Russia and other Iron Curtain countries that are much tougher than Rumania toward their Jewish nationals.

Oil leverage

Last year, some 2,000 Rumanian Jews were allowed to migrate to Israel.

Reportedly, another 25,000 have applied for permission to leave. Rumania's Jewish population is around 100,000. They numbered more than 800,000 before World War II; upwards of half of them were slaughtered by the Fascist regimes. For a while, the Communists permitted a large-scale exodus, but later imposed strict limitations.

In other respects, the Ceausescu government is the most liberal of the Iron Curtain countries in the treatment of its Jewish citizens. They have full freedom to exercise their religion, and there are few restrictions on their going to schools and holding government and other jobs. Jews are particularly prominent among Rumanian scientists and other technical professions.

Unquestionably, a key factor in the friendly relations between Israel and Rumania is a little-known pipeline that carries vital crude oil supplies from Iran to Rumania.

Extending from the port of Eilat, at the head of the Gulf of Aquaba, to the port of Ashkelon on the Mediterranean, this Israeli-owned and operated pipeline attained crucial importance in the international oil trade after the shutdown of the Suez Canal following Egypt's crushing defeat in the 1967 war. More than 50 per cent of the oil Rumania needs for its booming petrochemical industry is transported through this pipeline from Iran.

Because of Arab hostility, both Rumania and Israel maintain tight secrecy regarding both the existence and operation of the Eilat-Ashkelon pipeline. But among knowledgeable oilmen, the facility is known as one of Israel's most successful and profitable enterprises — in more ways than one.

New TV spectacular

Now that the West Virginia primary is out of the way, you will shortly be hearing about a new Congressional investigation of the television industry and certain of its high-placed and high-income moguls.

Subpoenas have already been quietly served on a number of them.

This latest probe is actually a continuation of the battle Rep. Harley Staggers, D-W.Va., chairman of the House Commerce Committee, has been waging with the three networks over their operations and news and other coverage.

While ABC, CBS and NBC are involved, CBS is the principal target.

West Coast dock workers accept pay board contract

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—West Coast longshoremen Monday accepted the pay board's cuts in their new contract with shippers, ending the threat of a resumption of the nation's longest dock strike.

The International Longshoremen's Union and Pacific Maritime Association, the shippers' representative, announced they had agreed to put into effect their agreement reached Feb. 10, including the Pay Board reductions.

Under the contract, straight time wage rates for longshoremen will be increased by 42 cents an hour and clerk's wages will be increased by 47.5 cents an hour. The new rates will be retroactive to Dec. 25, 1971.

The union and the shippers also agreed that if wage or price controls are eliminated on or before Nov. 30, 1972, the contract can be terminated on 60 days' notice. If they are eliminated after Jan. 31, 1973, the pact may be terminated on 24 hours notice.

The longshoremen struck 24 West Coast ports for 135 days, the longest dock strike in U.S. history, before arriving at a new contract with the PMA.

The Pay Board cut back the wage increases provided although allowing a package which went above its guidelines of 5.5 per cent.

ILWU President Harry Bridges once said the strike would be resumed if the Pay Board cut "one cent" from the agreement. But he later decided to see the board's ruling on the contract of East Coast shippers with the International Longshoremen's Association.

Four other labor members, including AFL-CIO President George Meany, had earlier resigned from the board over the ILWU cuts. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer, in a story over the weekend by marine writer Don Page, said "informed observers" told him that before Bridges agreed to accept the pay board cuts, the ILA had declined to join the West Coast dockers in a nationwide walkout.

Graduated income tax supported

HARRISBURG (UPI)—The President of the state League of Women Voters called on the legislature Monday to act quickly on an amendment to the state Constitution permitting a graduated income tax.

The bill has been passed in different forms by each chamber of the General Assembly and was placed before a conference committee.

Mrs. Burton S. Benovitz, president of the league, called the flat rate 2.3 per cent income tax "basically unfair, and a graduated income tax is needed to replace it."

To become law, the bill must be passed by two elected sessions of the General Assembly and then by the voters. If the bill is passed this year and again in 1973, it could go before the voters in the 1973 primary.

Welfare changes procedure

HARRISBURG (UPI)—The Welfare Department has begun a new emergency check cashing procedure in Philadelphia designed to double its control over the checks.

Welfare Secretary Helene Wohlgemuth said the procedure would save the state $250,000 a year by eliminating forged and fraudulent payments.

Under the method, a recipient applying for an emergency check at a district office is personally identified by a caseworker. His signature is matched with one in his file. Once identification is established, a check is issued with the recipient's signature on the front.

When he cashes the check at a bank, the recipient endorses the back and the signature is compared with the front of the check.

Emergency checks are issued at the local level to answer a dire need or when the delay in issuing a regular check would result in severe hardship to the recipient.

Grand jury to probe rackets

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—A second special federal grand jury was empaneled Monday to investigate organized crime and rackets in western Pennsylvania.

U.S. District Judge Wallace S. Gourley told the 13 men and eight women jurors that their length of service could be extended up to 36 months, if necessary.

Unlike other grand juries, the special grand jury may issue public reports on organized crime if approved by the judge. The report could criticize public officials by name without returning indictments.

"The grand jury is one of the most powerful functions of the government," Gourley said in his 15-minute charge. "Each of you must inquire into the evidence for violations."

The judge cautioned the jurors not to discuss cases with anyone.

"Treat your information as a sacred trust. You are most important in the preservation of democracy," he said.

A special grand jury convened last Jan. 16 has indicted about 100 persons on charges of gambling, narcotics, and mail fraud.

Shier against keeping tabs on legislators' expenses

HARRISBURG (UPI)—The chairman of the new state Compensation Commission said Monday there would be too much paper work if legislators were forced to account for their expense money.

"It is much more complicated than you would think," Richard Shier told UPI.

"My feeling is that if you asked legislators to account for their expense money, they would spend it all. They would hire secretaries, something, just to spend it."

He said the state also would have to hire more people to inspect the legislator's expense account reports.

"I think it's fair to say that the commission is dubious about setting up an army of bureaucrats monitoring a mountain of papers and hotel bills," he said.

Shier said the commission feels that the Internal Revenue Service is better equipped to inspect expense account statements.

Pennsylvania's 253 lawmakers now earn $15,600 a year, $7,200 of it in salaries and $8,400 of it in expense money. The lawmakers do not have to account for how they spend the expense money.

Shier indicated he favors a flat salary for legislators with no money earmarked specifically for expenses. "I personally find that more acceptable," he said.

The chairman said the commission will recommend its first salary increases for legislators, judges and top officials in the executive branch by about June 1. The recommendation becomes law within 60 days if it is not overturned by the legislature.

Shier, a professor at Franklin & Marshall College, denied reports the commission wants to increase legislative salaries to $22,500.

"The two meetings that we held were based on the ground rule that no numbers would be mentioned," he said. He said they were preoccupied by "unresolved matters of principle."

"Once we get everything else settled," he said, "we can sit down with a massive checker board and fill in the blanks for salaries, pensions, mileage, and all of those figures."

Shier said the principles the commission is arguing include whether all cabinet members should receive the same salaries or whether elected persons should receive more money.

The commission was worried that there would be a "slopover" of its recommendations to employees whose salaries are not set by the commission, he said.

"The greatest potential slopover exists in the retirement program," he said. For that reason, the commission's report on retirement funds probably will be delayed until next fall, he said.

Shier said the commission has asked for an opinion from the attorney general to determine whether it can legally postpone the retirement portion of its report.

100 lobby for welfare money

HARRISBURG (UPI)—About 100 members of welfare rights groups from around the state came here Monday to lobby for a proposed extra $54 million to keep welfare checks coming until June 30.

Roxanne Jones, head of the Philadelphia Welfare Rights Organization, said the purpose of the visit was to show "our concern for our children and tell the legislators that they should not take out the problems of welfare on the recipients."

She said they wanted to get the "feeling of the legislature and find out why they had to defeat the bill."

The House rejected a request by Public Welfare Secretary Helene Wohlgemuth last week for an extra $54 million for welfare checks.

Cadillac '72

It's a great time to buy the great car.

If you've ever considered owning a Cadillac, or even if you haven't, there are some especially good reasons for considering it right now.

For one, consider what Cadillac can mean to your vacation plans. It affords a degree of comfort, spaciousness and elegance that can help turn long, tedious trips into truly pleasurable ones.

Consider, too, the variety of Cadillac models currently offered. From the beautiful Coupe de Ville shown above to the elegant Eldorado Coupe and Convertible, there are nine great cars. And right now, your authorized Cadillac dealer can probably supply just the model you want just the way you want it.

Perhaps the most decisive reason, though, for buying a Cadillac now is the most practical one—the move to Cadillac ownership is especially easy at this time. Because of this, and because Cadillac's resale value is traditionally the highest in the land, buying a Cadillac now is an especially attractive investment.

So visit your authorized dealer soon. It's a great time for it.

Contract Bridge

The bidding:

East South West North
Pass 2NT Pass 3NT

Opening lead — six of spades.

Most hands require only routine treatment for the best result to be attained, but, unquestionably, some arise where declarer must do something extra-special to make the contract.

Take this deal where West leads a spade and East wins with the ace, dummy and declarer following low. South finesses the ten on the return, West taking the queen, and another spade lead forces out the king.

Declarer has seven winners and needs two more. He leads a heart to the ace and finesses a diamond on the return. When the queen wins, he is up to trick number eight. Fresh out of entries to dummy, his only remaining hope is to play the ace and another diamond, trusting that the king is doubleton or the suit is divided 3-3. Unfortunately, it turns out that East started with four to the king and declarer goes down one.

Actually, South can make the contract — by perfectly logical play — but he must do something highly unnatural by ordinary standards. At trick one he must play the king of spades on the ace!

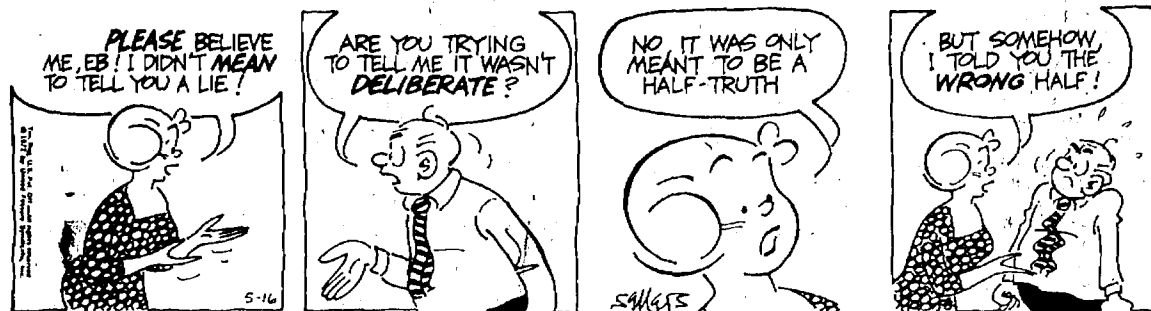

If he does, he cannot be stopped. The king play permits him to reach dummy twice (once with a spade and once with a heart) and take two diamond finesses instead of one.

As soon as East plays the ace, South can profitably apply the Rule of Eleven — which tells him that East cannot have another spade higher than the six. Dropping the king on the ace thus assures an extra entry to dummy that may prove vital.

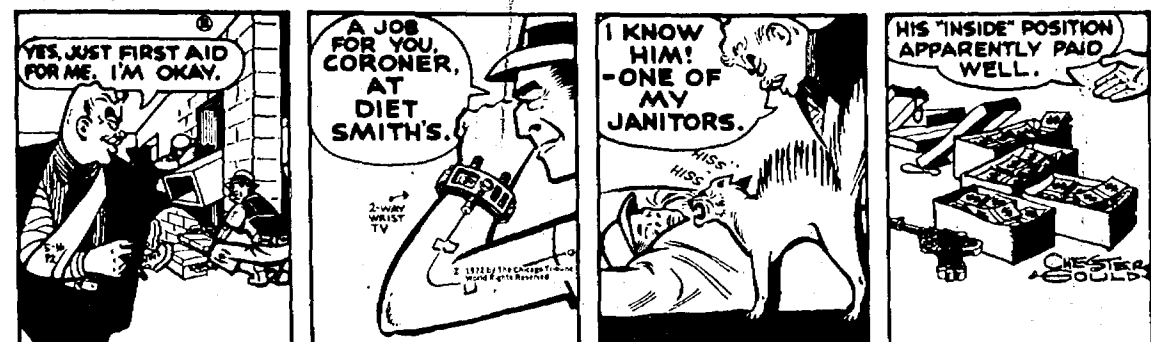

High cards are sometimes purposely sacrificed when there is a good reason to do so. This hand clearly calls for the king to be sacrificed. The tough part is to think of the play.

Harris poll indicates Wallace gains on busing stand

By LOUIS HARRIS

When asked to rate the major candidates for President on their views toward school busing to achieve racial balance, 30 per cent of the public agrees with President Nixon, 23 per cent with George Wallace, and 14 per cent with Hubert Humphrey. For Wallace, who is now up to 17 per cent in the Harris Survey as a potential third-party candidate, his score on the busing issue may be the forerunner of further gains.

Wallace has called for a Constitutional amendment outlawing busing of school children to achieve racial balance. President Nixon has rejected an amendment to the Constitution, but favors a moratorium of two years in enforcement of court-ordered busing during which black schools would be upgraded with federal help. Sen. Humphrey first endorsed President Nixon's position and then, 48 hours later, changed his mind.

A Harris Survey recently asked a nationwide cross section of 2,973 households: "If you had to choose, which one man would you most agree with on his stand on busing school children to achieve racial balance — Richard Nixon, Hubert Humphrey, or George Wallace?"

MOST AGREE WITH ON BUSING

	Nixon	Wallace	Humphrey	Not Sure
Nationwide	30	23	14	33
East	32	14	18	36
Midwest	31	22	13	34
South	24	39	11	26
West	34	15	16	35
Black	16	8	40	36
White	32	26	11	31
Union members	27	26	15	32

Although Wallace's position on busing is supported most in the South (rising to 54 per cent agreement in the Deep South), he is obviously crowding President Nixon on the issue among whites and among union members. Sen. Humphrey's less than unequivocal stand on busing has left him with less than normal support from blacks on this issue. He appears to have reaped the worst of all worlds by his backing and filling on the busing question.

The basic lineup of the public on the political meaning of the busing issue did not alter appreciably when the identity of the potential Democratic candidate was changed: — When Sen. George McGovern was substituted for Humphrey, the results showed much the same pattern:

MOST AGREE WITH ON BUSING

	Total Public
Nixon	28
Wallace	20
McGovern	11
Not sure	41

2nd confrontation not bad as first

Editors Note: The following dispatch was written by a UPI correspondent who covered the Cuban missile crisis from Moscow in 1962. He now covers the State Department in Washington.

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF
WASHINGTON (UPI) —For the second time in a decade, the United States and the Soviet Union are locked in a confrontation involving the defense of a Soviet ally. But in 1962, the danger of World War III erupting appeared far graver than it does now.

The Soviet-American dispute today is about North Vietnam's right to unify Vietnam —by force if necessary —and the alleged illegality of American intervention, air attacks, and mining of North Vietnamese harbors.

To the United States, which has poured blood and treasure into the war in staggering amounts, the outcome is a matter of honor and national commitment.

To the Soviet Union, there is, too, a commitment to a socialist friend. Until now that commitment of military aid has been discharged faithfully, sometimes reaching a cost of $1 billion a year. The U.S. blockade, Soviet diplomats are now warning, threatens their commitment and amounts to a humiliating ultimatum.

In 1962, the "Cuban Missile Crisis" involved the installation by Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev of Soviet offensive missiles on Cuba, a mere 90 miles from U.S. territory. The confrontation today is 10,000 miles from both Moscow and Washington.

Although the Russians claimed the weapons were purely defensive, they were targetable on many U.S. cities and gave the Kremlin a strategic military advantage at a time that the U.S.-Soviet missile balance had been pointing in favor of the United States.

Both President John F. Kennedy and President Nixon dealt with the crises in a methodical and deliberate manner.

Nixon, on assuming office in 1969, promoted a Vietnamization program intended to permit him to withdraw U.S. troops from the Indochina conflict.

After the current Communist offensive began, he resumed the bombing of North Vietnam which President Lyndon B. Johnson had stopped in 1968, and mined North Vietnamese harbors. Next, he ordered Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird to warn that the United States would take "all necessary measures" to prevent war supplies from reaching the Hanoi government.

President Kennedy, facing a direct Soviet military threat to the United States, summoned his top advisers, who suggested a wide range of action against Cuba, including air strikes to destroy the Soviet missiles. Kennedy eventually rejected such extreme action as a first step, realizing that it would probably many Soviet technicians and seriously worsen the confrontation.

To force the issue into the open, Kennedy made a dramatic speech Oct. 22, 1962, in which he outlined what the Soviet Union was doing in Cuba. And he declared a naval quarantine against offensive weapons bound for Cuba.

U.S. warships allowed Soviet ships carrying petroleum products to pass. But the American naval vessels were ordered to turn around any Soviet freighters with missiles.

The Soviet Union eventually ordered its freighters to idle in the water and then turn about before the blockade.

"We were eyeball to eyeball and the other fellow just blinked," Secretary of State Dean Rusk was quoted as saying at that stage of the confrontation.

The final stage of such international crises is a complicated process of diplomatic exchanges, considerations and eventually an historic decision.

Kennedy's problem was probably complicated by Khrushchev's mercurial and unpredictable personality. An intense exchange of messages began flowing between Moscow and Washington. Some of these were transmitted through unorthodox channels, including one forwarded to the State Department by ABC diplomatic correspondent John Scali, now a Nixon aide, who got it from a Soviet diplomat.

Khrushchev, at first, tried to bargain. In a television broadcast several days after Kennedy's speech, he demanded that the United States remove its missiles from Turkey as the price for the removal of Soviet missiles from Cuba.

Kennedy refused, standing firm on his demand that the Soviet Union restore the situation to what it had been before the crisis.

In the end, Kennedy and Khrushchev settled on a compromise: The Soviet Union would dismantle the missiles, and the United States would agree never to attack Cuba to unseat the Communist government of Premier Fidel Castro.

President Nixon is dealing with a far cooler and more collected Soviet leadership, and the initial Kremlin reaction has been mild. A statement by the Soviet news agency Tass has called for an end to the blockade, has denounced the mining of North Vietnam's harbors, and has promised that Moscow will draw "the appropriate conclusions."

The busing issue works most intensively in generating voter preferences for Gov. Wallace. The correlation is illustrated by the following results:

VOTE FOR PRESIDENT

	Nixon	Humphrey	Wallace
On busing agree with:
Nixon	52	17	9
Wallace	16	13	73
Humphrey	3	35	2
Not sure	29	35	16

Nixon's weakness on the busing issue is illustrated by the fact that one in eight of his supporters prefer Wallace's position, while no more than a bare majority like his stand the best. Sen. Humphrey is in even worse shape, with 17 per cent of his backers preferring the Nixon position and another 13 per cent the Wallace stand on busing. Scarcely more than one-in-three Humphrey voters agree with his approach on busing. By contrast, a massive 73 per cent of Wallace's supporters agree with him on the busing issue.

One of the ironies of the busing issue is that the proportion of Americans who nonetheless say they still favor desegregation of the public school system remains a 58-32 per cent majority, even though people also oppose busing by 79-14 per cent. When the vote of the majority in favor of desegregation is analyzed, the results are significant:

IMPACT OF ATTITUDE ON SCHOOL DESEGREGATION ON VOTE FOR PRESIDENT

	On School Desegregation:
	Favor	Oppose
	(58)	(32)
	Per cent	Per cent

Voting for:

Nixon	40	39
Humphrey	39	31
Wallace	12	22
Not sure	9	8

In 1968 George Wallace's vote rose to a high of 21 per cent as a third-party candidate, closely approximating the 22 per cent he achieves among people opposed to desegregation of the schools. But then a reaction set in against Wallace and he dropped to 13 per cent in three weeks.

The racial issue is like an elastic band and when there appears to be overkill in one direction or the other, the public snaps back in the other direction.

This spring's uproar over school busing could produce a counter reaction by voting time next November.

Bottler favors returnable bottles

Beverage industry criticized

BY CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Peter Chokola urged an East Stroudsburg State College ecology class Monday "to ask for, demand and purchase soft drinks in returnable bottles."

The president of the Chokola Beverage Co. in Wilkes-Barre criticized the beverage industry for doing "far too little" to curb litter and solid waste.

"Many in our industry and the industries that supply us are seeking greater profits at the expense of the environment. In effect, they are pollution profiteering."

Chokola said the only anti-pollution effort he could support is House Bill 3361, which would require a five cent deposit on returnable bottles, thus using "money as the incentive."

"I do not believe our industry, or any industry, can reserve to itself the unrestricted right to package and market their products in any form they choose, without regard for the ultimate consequences to the environment and the general welfare of the public."

"A free market, or the practice of free enterprise, does not carry with it an implication of unlimited freedom without responsibility," added

Chokola, who testified before a U.S. Senate subcommittee in March in support of returnable bottles.

Noting the industry was "founded on and thrived with" returnable bottles for 75 bottles years, he contended the soft drink industry may be the only one "that has an acceptable alternative to the growing problems of pollution in the form of litter and solid waste."

"In this respect," he continued, "the non-returnable container has done for our industry what the Boston Strangler did for door-to-door selling."

Chokola contended that continued channeling of public money into the collection and disposal of privately produced and discarded items "amounts to a public subsidy of waste pollution."

"If we are ever to truly gain control of the problem, we must reduce the volume of waste and the difficulty of its disposal," he said. "The answer to problems caused by technology is not always more technology."

He pointed out it costs 30 cents in New York to collect and dispose of a bottle, about seven times the original cost.

"The only valid objection to the returnable bottle was the inconvenience to the consumer of returning it and the rehandling of it by the retailer."

"Isn't it ironic that now, due to the critical problems created by this 'convenience' container, its acceptable existence demands it be returned and rehandled for recycling, thereby becoming a returnable container after all?"

He said groups seeking to ban deposits claim soft drink containers represent only six per cent of litter. He put the figure at 50 per cent.

"I find this deceitful and deliberately deceiving — as well as an insult to the intelligence of a thinking person — because it equates a cigar wrapper or gum wrapper with a bottle or can in the compilation of percentages."

"I like to think any attempt at such deceit is below our industry and will hardly contribute to any solution that we are honestly seeking."

TIRAC official blasts Cahill for exploiting Tocks

STROUDSBURG — New Jersey Gov. William Cahill was blasted Monday for "exploiting" the proposed Tocks Island Dam and surrounding national park projects "as a means of obtaining new large sums of federal money for New Jersey, especially highway construction."

Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council (TIRAC) Director Secretary Thomas Klock charged Cahill and New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner Richard Sullivan are "fully aware" their recent reversal on the projects will undermine the projects' survival.

At the annual governors' meeting of the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) in Washington last week, Cahill had reversed his previous support for the projects, questioning the need for them and their impact on New Jersey.

Cahill attached a $683 million price tag to new highways to handle national park visitors and also called the DRBC's proposed regional sewerage system "massive and unrealistic."

"There is little question that a construction start will not take place for another year, if then, because of New Jersey's stand," Klock said, assessing the situation.

He stressed his main "concern" is the "mis-direction" that has come from Trenton to TIRAC on the regional sewerage system," evidenced by Sullivan's previous affirmative vote on the plan at the DRBC's March 29 meeting.

Klock charged the new position taken by Cahill and Sullivan is "just further evidence of the lack of interest on the part of higher levels of government to communicate with the region."

He said, when Sullivan had voted in support of the DRBC system in March, it was after amendments giving it increased flexibility had been included at his request.

"I took the cue from New Jersey and, when they voted for this, it led me to believe this was acceptable to New Jersey and the local area," Klock maintained. "But then he turns around and he and Gov. Cahill call the action by the Basin Commission unrealistic."

As the DRBC system now stands, it would sewerage the tri-state area one regional step above each municipality having its own system, according to Klock who stressed the inter-state agency will now only act to insure the provision of sewerage facilities when local initiative is not taken.

He contended the current system "could be almost anything" above the individual municipal level as long as the various treatment plants' discharges meet the minimum 95 per cent phosphate removal requirement set by the Federal Council on Environmental Quality.

Klock said the DRBC intends to prepare a sewerage feasibility study on the various alternative systems and the practicality of carrying them out sometime during the year.

"And this is where this region can pretty much control the direction of the study if they exert enough interest," he added.

Klock explained this would be done by the adoption of a regional framework that would set the desired growth pattern. "In certain areas, growth would not be attracted by setting a plan that would not furnish sewers to permit the growth there," he cited as an example. "In other areas these facilities would be provided where the growth is desired."

Each local municipality would then review subdivision applications against this master regional plan and, where not in accordance, they should not receive approval, he said.

With the DRBC now offering the local municipalities a more flexible system, Klock said they are still "not picking up on it" despite the lack of the plan's former rigidity.

"All the interest here is still negative and the attitudes do not seem to be in any positive direction in terms of using the situation," he said, referring to all of TIRAC's member counties including Monroe.

"They now have a marvelous opportunity to benefit from all that has happened and, regardless of Tocks, to set a natural growth pattern that relates to the area," Klock said.

He further challenged the lack of "concern shown for property owners in the region who are now caught in a deplorable position because of this political footballing which could go on forever."

"I'd just like to have the politicians put themselves in the place of these property owners who have sat by for 10 years not knowing what will happen," he blasted. "As it stands now, they could have a lot of surplus government property on their hands."

The Pocono Record

The Stroudsburgs, Pa. — Tues., May 16, 1972 11

Christine Jorgensen speaks to college audience.

Miss Jorgensen addresses largest ESSC audience

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Miss Christine Jorgensen, the lad who became a lady, managed to draw more East Stroudsburg State College students Monday night than any speaker this year.

"I don't have the vaguest idea why they came," she said in a husky, contralto after her talk, whisking through autograph signing. "And they didn't leave, either."

Her opening remarks to the group — part of whom sat sardined in the aisles — were: "I can't believe I did the whole thing. I tried it and I liked it."

Most of her speech was spent tracing her life, from a "reclusive little boy" to vacillating between sexual identity to the aftermath of the sex change, which garnered her more publicity than any individual has received before or since.

Miss Jorgensen, an ex-G.I. named George (her military career lasted 13 months) recalled being asked during the physical if she liked girls.

She said she thought to herself: "I like apple pie, too, but I wouldn't want to sleep with either of them."

She repeatedly stressed both male and female characteristics are inherent in everyone, as well as telling the assemblage their sexual mores are more broad than those 20 years ago, when she had the operation in Copenhagen.

Example: "Your first concept in meeting people is let's talk human being first . . . Then, if we want to, male and female."

"I think we have a better society now in many ways," she said, "but I think we have left something out — family structure. We need people who care about us come hell or high water."

"How's your sex life?" someone bellowed in a question and answer period.

"Great!" she fired back. "How's yours?" She later said: "I never encountered sex as a male. I love it as a female." The remark drew loud applause.

When her story broke in the early fifties, an Air Force sergeant who dated her was quoted as: "She's got a personality that's hard to beat and the best body of any girl I ever met."

Banned in Boston after the operation, she told "how every move I made seemed to be of world significance. But if it was not me, it would have been someone else. The time was right for the beginning of the sexual revolution."

She had this to say when asked about hostile feelings people have displayed toward her: "I represent something in their life they would not prefer to have represented or brought out." She reported afterward "a man who is not afraid of his masculinity is not afraid of me."

While she cannot conceive, she said adoption was improbable "because of the price he'd have to pay for being Christine Jorgensen's child."

She has, however, been engaged twice. The first was at age 30, when she assumed "every woman should be married," and broke the second when the man figured she'd support him.

Pointing out she has never had bust surgery, she didn't rule out the possibility of a "Phyllis Diller" facelift in a year or so.

Eligibility questioned in Pike

By ANDREA B. STERN
Pocono Record Reporter

MILFORD — The Pike County Board of Assistance's first public meeting was postponed Monday evening even before it was realized that none of the county's public intended to be present.

The fledgling board's postponement was the result of a dilemma over whether 75 per cent of the newly appointed members are legally qualified to serve in the all-volunteer capacity.

According to Department of Welfare stipulations governing the formation of such boards, no elected official is permitted to serve.

It was estimated at the board's early evening meeting, which was to precede the public gathering, that 75 per cent of the seven-member group recently appointed by Gov. Milton Shapp are either currently serving as township committeemen or in some other county elected position.

Having unsuccessfully tried to receive an answer to the paradox from Harrisburg for the past three months, the board decided Monday to table further action, including the selection of a chairman, until its next meeting on June 19 by which time it hopes to have obtained word from the governor.

However, despite the struggle, there are indications that little public interest will be generated locally as evidenced by the poor showing at Monroe County's three test meetings held recently and the total lack of an audience in Pike County on Monday.

James J. Wood, the board's executive director, estimated the current breakdown of persons on public assistance in Pike County figures out to 275 cash assistance recipients, 60 persons receiving food stamps and 75 receiving medical assistance.

Asked if the number of recipients is on the rise, Wood answered, "We seem to balance about the same. There hasn't been much of a change here in the past few years. Of course the population has increased a great deal and the state of the economy could change the increase in our role."

Land developer criticized

KUNKLETOWN — A heated controversy broke out at Eldred Township's Planning Commission meeting Monday night when several members debated the county's involvement in the approval of part of the Blouse development in Kunkletown.

A 13-lot subdivision was approved by the Eldred Township Supervisors several months ago and was in compliance with county standards. Several members suggested, however, that Frederick Blouse was further subdividing land without complying with county regulations.

The controversy arose when Adam Meckes, chairman of the Eldred supervisors, said someone from the local state health office had okayed the sewerage requirements for the additional subdivision.

According to planning chairman, Jim Price, Blouse has turned a one-family dwelling into a three-family residence without increasing sewerage facilities.

In addition, Price said Blouse has a two-family dwelling under construction and has placed a trailer on adjacent property.

The three residences are on less than one acre and according to the commission, Blouse is further subdividing his property in violation of the county's subdivision ordinance.

Meckes reported that the Eldred sewerage inspector Dean Leslie, had visited the three proposed sites and decided to allow a more competent representative from the state health office to approve the sewerage facilities.

Price suggested that the commission ask the state health officer to review the inspection and make a report to the board regarding percolation tests and other planning specifications.

"Let's give him an opportunity to answer this," said Price.

"If we aren't satisfied with his report, then we can ask the state to come in and enforce its sanitation laws." The planners agreed to the suggestion.

HoJo opening delayed

DELAWARE WATER GAP — The Howard Johnson motel and restaurant in Delaware Water Gap, scheduled to open its doors to the general public Monday, did not open.

The 104 unit motel-restaurant complex is owned by Leisure Time Properties, Inc. Those named as principles for the facility are Harry Lee and Robert and Harry Ahnert. The Ahnerts are the owners of the Fernwood resort in Bushkill and Lee is a Stroudsburg attorney.

Robert Porreca, manager of the new area "HoJo's", cited construction delays due to inclement weather as the reason for failure to open Monday.

"We were shooting for May 25 after our last construction meeting," says Porreca, "but there's just no way we'll make it now. Just no way."

When completed, the structure will contain a banquet room with a dining capacity of 300 and is being constructed along Howard Johnson's flat roof, lower silhouetted "new style."

Total cost

Financing for the project was accomplished through the United Penn Bank of Wilkes Barre. The total cost is estimated at $1.7 million and the HoJo franchise cost the principles $20,000.

The "new style" building is said to be only the second such Howard Johnson unit in the country and was designed by RKR Associates, Stroudsburg.

Leroy Shoemith and Son, of Mountainhome, were awarded the more than $1.3 million construction contract and erection of the building has been underway since last August.

"It's a real mess around here," noted Porreca. "But it's always like that when you're near completion. Everybody's putting on the finishing touches now."

The two-story motel will be operated by Leisure Time Properties while the restaurant operation will be handled by Howard Johnson's. The new facility is expected to open approximately 50 employment positions.

Decision on art center site expected in near future

BY DAVID J. NICHOLAS
Record County Editor

POCONO MANOR — Governor Milton J. Shapp expressed hope Monday a decision on a site for the Pocono Art Center will be forthcoming in three to four weeks.

The governor said the site committee is presently studying three or four locations, described only as being "in the Poconos" for the facility which he said can hopefully be completed by 1976.

Shapp told a group of educators in the Poconos last week the choices had been narrowed to two locations.

Noting the proposed completion date coincides with the United States' Bicentennial celebration, he said the facility will not play a large part in the observance since most activities are planned for areas which are high in history of the era from 1770 to 1790.

Shapp said he could not quote a price tag for the project since the specific type of facility has not yet been decided. He said such factors as price of land and the scope of the facility must be considered in the total and final figure.

"It (the art center) will be a tremendous boost to the area," Shapp said, adding it will bring hundreds of thousands of people into the Poconos from the Eastern Seaboard as well as from the Mid-east.

Commenting on the Bicentennial Committee's leaning toward the choice of Boston, Mass., as the location for the major celebration, Shapp said celebrations will be held in all 50 states and pointed out observances have been scheduled for Philadelphia, Valley Forge and Washington's Crossing.

He said the final choice of the site for the international exposition will be up to the committee.

Nursing homes

In a discussion of the federal ordered state compliance with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare standards for nursing homes, Shapp said it will cost the Commonwealth $3 million to meet the stiffened rules.

The federal government has threatened to cut off federal Medicaid funds if the state does not meet the deadline.

He stated some of the regulations, "designed by bureaucrats," are not necessarily designed to make the nursing homes more safe for the patients.

The required eight-foot hallways, supposedly designed for easy evacuation from the facility during a fire will require many nursing facilities to be torn down and rebuilt.

State officials are meeting with department heads in Washington to discuss some of the rules which are "unnecessary," Shapp stated.

Shapp conceded some of the

nursing homes in the Commonwealth are "flagrant violators of common sense" in regard to compliance with fire laws and these might be closed.

The Governor also said the federal government should take a second look at the required regulations.

Discussing aid to non-public schools, the Governor said the proposed value-added tax is the "worst type of tax" because of the cumulative effect on the price of goods.

Conceding any connection between church and state is unconstitutional, Shapp emphasized the need for non-tax funds for the support of these schools.

He said the public school system is having a difficult time as it is and noted if the 30 or 40 per cent of students in non-public schools were to deluge the public schools it could result in a collapse of the educational system.

He offered no solid alternatives to the use of public funds for the support of the non-public schools.

Monroe population too small

Recycling too expensive

STROUDSBURG — A solid waste recycling plant in Franklin, Ohio, is technically exciting, but too expensive unless it is fed a million pounds of garbage every day, Solid Waste Advisory Committee spokesmen reported Monday.

Back from a recent tour of the Black and Clawson plant the solid waste spokesmen told the Monroe County Commissioners the sophisticated recycling operation is feasible for a population of about 20,000.

The pilot plant in Ohio was built under the auspices of an Environmental Protection Agency grant that paid all but $400,000 of the $2.2 million capital cost.

Douglas Williams, chairman of the committee, said the plant would be cost prohibitive with Monroe County's present population.

The plant will not process large waste material such as auto parts, tree stumps, refrigerators and stoves.

A positive note from the Ohio trip was the possibility of a waste disposal operation of some type which will not offend populations concentrations close to the plant. Housing was reported within 1000 yards of the recycling plant.

Although the committee members reported the plant would not be economically feasible at this time, they reserved conclusions until the entire committee meets to consider the alternatives.

With total landfill eliminated as a solution, and the apparent non-feasibility of the recycling plant, Monroe County may settle on incineration or hauling.

An incineration plant in Shippensburg has been inspected by the Monroe County Commissioners. The idea of hauling the waste to another county for disposal is favored by Commissioner William F. Quinn.

Quinn said spokesman for the waste transfer concept are scheduled to meet with the commissioners Thursday.

In other matters, the commissioners reported only Monroe and Carbon Counties have expressed interest in a Resource Conservation and Development program being offered by the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania.

The project would establish a seven county regional organization for the purpose of building muscle for federal conservation funds under the Department of Agriculture.

Unless more counties in the region endorse the project, it probably will not come to fruition.

From Pleasant Valley Manor, the commissioners were notified of compliance with Department of Welfare rules governing skilled nursing in non-profit nursing homes.

A checklist for compliance with the federal Life Safety

Code of 1967 is being prepared by architects for the county home, according to the letter from Manor Administrator Lawrence Butz.

The Life Safety Code is expected to replace the state Department of Labor and Industry standards for safety in health care facilities.

Reporting on an informal meeting with the Stroudsburg Planning Commission, Commission Chairman Mrs. Nancy B. Shukaitis said the commissioners were asked to register their positions on moving the courthouse to Aris Street, Stroudsburg.

Mrs. Shukaitis said she and Quinn had said the courthouse relocation should await more pressing matters. Specifically, she mentioned the possibility of capital expenditures relating to improvements at the county home.

She said Commissioner Arlington Martin said he was in favor of relocating the courthouse.

Board disfavors lump-sums

Teacher payment reviewed

EAST STROUDSBURG — Lump-sum salary payments, an option professional school teachers used to collect their summer payments, was viewed with disfavor Monday night at the East Stroudsburg School Board meeting.

The board, during a brief special meeting to accept bids on supplies, said it would stick to the negotiated contract when lump-sum payments are requested.

Payments will be made to retiring teachers only, the board said in its only exception.

Professional teachers in some school districts have an option to request their summer pay either in full or partially. If the request is not made, the teachers are automatically paid on a 26-week schedule and receive compensation during the summer months.

The East Stroudsburg Board was informed by Superintendent Mrs. Pauline Peterson that requests had been made for full payments. The professional personnel offered various reasons for the requests with travelling being one of the main items.

Mrs. Peterson said lump-sum payments had been granted in the past, but the number of requests has been growing and that it is "now an individual matter."

The board said its policy will be to adhere to the negotiated contract. What is in the contract will be followed; if not, it can be discussed.

In its brief session prior to going into executive session to discuss finances and other issues, the board okayed a contract for school supplies. The bid was awarded to Garrett-Buchanan Co., for $14,161.99 for 405 items.

Recommendation was made and approved for bids to be opened on Monday, June 5 for industrial arts and athletic supplies.

The regular meeting of the board will be held Monday, May 22 at which time the 1972-73 school budget will be on the agenda.

Met-Ed rate hike frozen

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The Public Utility Commission imposed a temporary freeze Monday on a proposed overall $22.6 million rate increase by Metropolitan Edison Co., Reading.

The increase would have affected 302,000 customers in 14 counties, including Monroe County, today.

Met-Ed was allowed $12.6 million of the total $22.6 million request on an interim basis last June 30 subject to refunds. The PUC suspended the remaining $10 million requested pending the outcome of a final determination in the case.

Donohue joins '190 club' at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Mark Donohue of Newton Square, Pa., Monday became the fifth driver to surpass 190 miles per hour in practice for the $1 million "500" classic. Twenty-one positions were still open for the May 27 race and Donohue and last year's pole sitter, Peter Revson, Redondo Beach, Calif., were both on the track for practice runs in British-built cars. Both were among drivers who did not get a chance to try to qualify in last weekend's rain and storm abbreviated sessions. Weather permitting, they will be among the first to get a try when trials resume Saturday. Bob Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., virtually clinched the No. 1 starting spot Sunday at a record speed of nearly 196 miles per hour. Meanwhile, Jim Malloy, 36, Denver, remained unconscious and in critical condition from injuries sustained in a fiery practice crash Sunday. Officials of the United States Auto Club Technical Committee say their investigation determined no mechanical failure was involved when the car Malloy was driving crashed into a retaining wall with tremendous force. Frank Del Roy, chairman of the committee, said, "It might have been the wind. We may never know the exact cause." Malloy's new car was demolished. It was the first time since the track was opened April 29 that a driver sustained injuries in a crash while preparing for the race. The speedway oval was shut down a large part of the day because of rain, but 14 racers managed to get onto the track. Those out included Tom Bigelow, a rookie from Whitewater, Wis., for the first time in his primary car. Other top speeds Monday included Mel Kenyon, Lebanon, Ind., at 186.650.

Matlock wins 4th in row

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jim Fregosi belted a 3-run homer in the eighth inning Monday night to give the New York Mets a 5-3 victory over the Montreal Expos and provide rookie John Matlock with his fourth straight victory. The Mets, who managed only three hits over the first seven innings against Bill Stoneman and John Strohman, began their eighth-inning rally when Rusty Staub singled with one out. Staub moved to second on a balk and after Cleon Jones walked Fregosi lined a 3-2 pitch into the left field bullpen for his third homer of the season.

Home runs aid Phils in victory

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Woody Fryman, backed by homers by Mike Anderson and Willie Montanez, pitched a six-hitter and hit a two-run single Monday night to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 4-0 triumph over the Chicago Cubs. Fryman survived a shaky start and retired 16 straight batters after a fourth inning single by Carmen Fanzone to pick up his second victory of the season. Ferguson Jenkins, who had won eight straight from the Phillies, took the loss. Anderson gave the Phillies a 1-0 lead in the fifth with his second homer of the season.

Nets even series by 110-105 win

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (UPI) — Billy Paulz scored 30 points and hauled down 18 rebounds Monday night as the New York Nets rallied in the fourth quarter to defeat the Indiana Pacers 110-105 and even their ABA playoff finals at two games apiece. Rick Barry who scored 26 points, tallied the first three baskets for New York in the fourth quarter as the Nets battled to overcome an 84-78 deficit. The brilliant New York forward, the leading scorer in this series, tallied 10 points for the period. Ollie Taylor scored eight for the Nets, including the go-ahead basket with eight minutes to go that gave New York a 92-90 lead.

Indiana's big men, George McGinnis and Mel Daniels, each picked up their fifth personal fouls early in the final period to give New York control of the boards. John Baum, an NBA castoff, filled in admirably for starting forward Tom Washington and had 11 rebounds, most of them coming after McGinnis and Daniels lost their effectiveness.

A basket by Barry and two free throws by Taylor sent the Nets into a 101-95 lead with four minutes remaining. John Roche then got hot with six points to

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

At least three out of every four housewives read newspaper ads prior to their shopping trips. This finding was confirmed in a recent national study of 1000 urban housewives, conducted by Creative Research Services, Inc.

The study also shows that six out of ten women read food advertising on an average day. Nine out of ten women who see food ads buy advertised items.

These findings apply to all sorts of housewives, from those in small family units all the way up to those with huge families and large weekly food budgets.

You can reach this newspaper oriented buying segment by advertising regularly in The Pocono Record.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) There will be persons and things which could cause aggravation and seemingly unwarranted delays. Curb your tendency to "strike back" and determine to be patient. Everything will work out.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) Stellar aspects indicate new projects, some reconstruction in your life, but you could lose out on good opportunities if you are lethargic or indifferent — a tendency now.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) Originate and invent, as is your want, but do not summarily reject the ideas of others. You may be able to work with them in several productive ways.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) You shouldn't face many obstacles now, but be on guard against "little" errors, miscalculations.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) Put aside all thought of frivolity and concentrate on the business of the day. Don't overtax yourself, however, and don't make drastic changes in projects now running smoothly.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) A fine outlook for those of you who make the best use of your talents and who are alert to opportunities — even small ones.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) Within the framework of your capabilities, strive to improve efforts—especially in occupational areas. Don't fear occupational areas. Don't fear to try new methods, however.

October 24 to November 23 (Scorpio) Get an early start or you may lose time later trying to catch up. Don't be "thrown" by challenges which may come your way. They can prove highly stimulating.

November 24 to December 31 (Sagittarius) You may feel somewhat boxed in now, restrained where you would like more freedom. Look well before pressing beyond certain limits, however. Some of your goals may border on the unreasonable.

December 22 to January 21 (Capricorn) A good day for attaining some of your lofty ambitions, even though certain projects may seem to be stymied for the moment. Press on!

January 22 to February 15 (Aquarius) Admonitions for this day: Avoid consternation and confusion. With much activity indicated, these could prove obstacles to success. Emphasize uncomplicated thinking and acting.

February 16 to March 21 (Pisces) Avoid a tendency to let others take over your responsibilities. Achievement, no matter how small, can only be gained by your own consistent performance.

You are extremely versatile and many fields beckon your talents. Your natural caution could make you an outstanding banker or lawyer and an innate curiosity could lead you to science. March 21 to April 20 (Aries) There will be persons and things which could cause aggravation and seemingly unwarranted delays. Curb your tendency to "strike back" and determine to be patient. Everything will work out.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) Originate and invent, as is your want, but do not summarily reject the ideas of others. You may be able to work with them in several productive ways.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) You shouldn't face many obstacles now, but be on guard against "little" errors, miscalculations.

THE ABC'S OF DIAMONDS BEGINS WITH THE LETTER

NOCTURNE SET

Before you select your diamond ring, know the
"4C's" of diamond quality and value:

Color. From shades of yellow to finest white.

Clarity. The measurement of imperfections.

Cut. Determines the degree of brilliance.

Carat Weight. The measure of a diamond's size.

Every ArtCarved diamond is carefully selected and graded for superior color, clarity and cut. The carat weight of the diamond is permanently engraved on the inside of each ArtCarved ring, providing lasting value for your lasting love.
